

the village VOICE

Cathy Weis at Dixon Place (see Dance)

DANCE

CATHY WEIS Old Mother Hubbard lived in a shoe. Dixon Place is of equivalent size, and interactive dancer-videographer Weis uses the microspace to develop a “three-dimensional 20th-century fairy tale,” as well as a solo with a televised version of her own head—sort of a ventriloquist act. Sharing the intimate frolic nightly is Scott Heron, with other Downtown divas—Ishmael Houston-Jones, Jennifer Miller, Patricia Hoffbauer—dropping in. Text’s by Jim Neu. If you’re lucky, you’ll hit an “audience participation” night and get to meld electronically with a friend. Friday and Saturday at 8, through April 24, Dixon Place, 258 Bowery, 219-3088. (Zimmer)